Losses of the South

An article has lately been extensively circulated from the pen of Commodore Maury, in which he estimates Southern losses during the war at the extraordinary total of $7,000,000. The Montgomery, Ala., Mail publishes a letter from Robt. Tyler, Esq., son of the decease lex-President. and late Register of the Treasury of the Confederate States, who think the statement consideralde exaggerated. Mr. Maury charges in his first item a loss of $3,000,000 on emancipated slaves; but Mr. Tyler thaths this much too high. In all the Southern States, before the war there were about 3,500, 000 slaves, which, at an average price of $1,750,000,000. In the next item Mr. Maury puts down the sum of $2,-000,000,000 for expenses of the war. independently of private spoliations and losses. But it must be remember-The U. To sub ect such a people, in the wantonness of power, to unnecessary insults and oppressive burdens, would be alike inuman and impolitic. Do not justice and true pollicy both suggest that, with a restored Union prejudices and hatred should long hesitate before taking the risk of sacrificing the fixed facts of our political experience to the pleasing as-sumptions of a plausible theory: should also beware of the danger of being exgroundless hopes to commit liberticide. to slay true freedom in the name and on the alter of some false prophet,
